

The key to your child's SCHOOL SUCCESS is

YOU!

Did you know that children whose parents are involved in their education do better in school—and in life?

Parental involvement is critical to every child's school "career." But being involved doesn't mean doing their homework for them. It means joining your child's educational team.

That's why we are offering an exciting video and discussion program on parent involvement called Parents on Board. In just three meetings, you will learn how to "get on board" with your children's educators by:

- creating a school-smart home
- establishing a working relationship with the school
- using effective discipline and encouragement
- promoting attitudes that build success
- coaching your child in reading, writing, spelling, math and science (without being an expert!)

So come meet other parents, share some common questions and concerns, and learn how to help your child find academic success. We're looking forward to meeting you. Sign up today!

• THE AUTHORS •

Three childcare experts worked together to bring you this program.

Prior to founding Active Parenting Publishers in 1983, Dr. Michael Popkin—a proud father of two children—was a family therapist practicing in Atlanta. Dr. Bettie B. Youngs is a noted expert on the effects of stress and self-esteem on children's achievement. Dr. Jane M. Healy is a reading and learning specialist who is recognized world-wide for her books about using brain research in classroom and parenting situations.
